

Emerging Professionals Program

“Our mission: to encourage and promote the development of knowledge, skills and attributes in young professionals within the CSEG through a variety of educational, networking, and employability skills events in hopes of helping to develop tomorrow’s geoscientists today.”

The CSEG Emerging Professionals Program (EPP) is a national program sponsored by the CSEG Foundation and the Canadian Society of Exploration Geophysicists (CSEG). The initiative will provide support for post-secondary graduates and young working professionals whom are involved with the CSEG and are looking to develop their soft and technical skills.

Through September 1st to August 31st the EPP is looking to host monthly events where industry members have the opportunity to interact and socialize with emerging professionals. These events include but are not limited to technical talks, networking events, employability workshops and etc.

The EPP would like to invite experienced industry professionals to pass on their knowledge by giving a lecture on a topic of industry interest. This lecture will provide young professionals with the opportunity to further develop their knowledge by exposing them to industry concepts and processes. Ultimately, this will help them transition from a post-secondary institute to the geoscience industry.

In this challenging economic environment there are a significant number of individuals who are either unemployed, underemployed or are just struggling in their career. The EPP is eager to help any CSEG member who would like assistance. It is important to recognize that the future of the industry lies within these young professionals; to invest in them today, will allow the geoscience community to flourish in the future.
